Zürich, Galerie Lelong, David Nash, 2005

The 'Sphere, Cube, Pyramid' motif appears across Nash's body of work, with a piece of the same subject housed in the Tate (Lonon) collection. For Nash, these shapes have a deep spiritual and natural significance, representing the fundamental logic of the natural world. He sees these shapes, along with elements like fire and water, as a way to explore the connection between humanity and nature.
